

Garlic And Ginger Export Business Gradually Resumed

As China is a major producer of ginger and garlic, the export situation of domestic companies has received extensive attention from overseas markets. At present, some domestic factories have begun to resume work, and export business is gradually recovering.

The main export market of a domestic company is North America, Europe and the Middle East. The company official said, "Recently, the demand for domestic garlic in Europe and the Middle East is high, especially in small bags. The recent export volume has decreased by a dozen containers compared with the same period last year."

Regarding the China Garlic Price, the person in charge said, "Because of the recent gradual resumption of production in many factories, coupled with large stocks, the amount of garlic released to the market is large. Affected by supply and demand, the price of fresh garlic has declined recently. In addition to the garlic market, the operation of the ginger industry is also slowly recovering. A person in charge of a ginger export company stated that starting from last week (March 9), the company began to resume semi-resumption operations. The person in charge said, "The price of ginger produced in the country has risen recently. The current Garlic Price is 1700-1800 US dollars / ton. It is expected that domestic enterprises will concentrate their exports for a period of time after large-scale resumption of work, and the price may drop significantly by then."
